The background of the image is a close-up, high-contrast photograph of a rock face. The rock is layered and textured, with various shades of brown, tan, and grey. There are some small, dark, circular holes or indentations in the rock surface. The lighting is bright, creating strong highlights and shadows that emphasize the rugged texture of the rock.

Manufactured in EU.
Almost the 90% of our products are manufactured in Barcelona, Spain.

The line of high toughness. This high grade polyester textile guarantees an excellent performance and durability. A similar product to Cordura but not manufactured by Dupont.

The best zip for the best products.

Why sustainable? Because all our products with this seal are made in Barcelona with local raw materials. The low mileage in our production processes reduces the impact we make on the environment.

All our products pass through our laboratory or test bench. The Charko boulder test is a reflection of our struggle for quality, where we test all our products to the limit. How? With the help of our team of ambassadors, we subject the products to a high level of abuse to test the of strength, flexibility and durability of our products.

Cordura is the brand name for a collection of fabrics used in a wide array of products including luggage, backpacks, pants, military wear and performance apparel. Cordura fabrics are known for their durability and resistance to abrasions, tears and scuffs. Originally developed and registered as a trademark by E.I. duPont de Nemours and Company (DuPont) in 1929, it is now the property of Invista (a wholly owned subsidiary of Koch Industries, Inc.).[1] Cordura fabrics are made using yarns or fibers from Invista. Fabrics can be made using 100% synthetic fiber or in blends with cotton or other natural fibers. Product hangtag to use the Cordura brand name, each fabric should be tested and approved by Invista.

Why do we use organic cotton? 6% of crops grown in the world are cotton plants. Did you know that 20% of the pesticides used in the world are used on that 6%? Our organic cotton producers never use pesticides. That's the reason why we do it!! ;)

Our team of designers/climbers use state of the art printing techniques to make high quality designs on all our products.
